Some of the smallest youngsters ever

With a 4-to-0 victory earned over the strong Boston College nine at Brookland vesterday, Catholic University goes in against Lehigh today. The Penn players have played few games this season, and no line has been gained on their strength.

Coach Charlie Moran uncorked a new hurler at C. U. yesterday in the person of Kendrick, who came through with a clever performance. Boston College was held to three scattered hits, seven were strick out, and but one was walked. Thirteen hits were gleaned off Gill, the visitor.

Washington College is visiting at Georgetown today. Boston College plays tomorrow, and on Saturday Princeton will play the Hilltoppers. Harvard is here tomorrow to meet the Catholic University n.ne. The Broklanders are anxious to hand the Crimson players a licking, as Virginia got a 2-all the out of their meeting with the Boston men. Eddie Mahan will probably work for Harvard, while either Johnson or Croker will pitch for C. U.

The Georgetown Preps have suffered but one defeat at the hands of the locals this season. Tech managed to get a 5-to-7 win out of their meeting. Western was beaten, and Central held to an 8-to-8 tie. Business fell victim to winning by 16 to 4.

Just to show that Saturday's win over Eastern was no fluke, St. Albans went back again yesterday and grabbed off a 14-to-5 win in five innings. Welsch and Litchfield gave fourteen bases on balls to the St. Albans players, and as hits and errors came at opportune times for the St. Albans teams, runs were splattered over the plate every inning.

Western and Business are scheduled to hook up in a tennis match today. Neither of the schools has done much in playing this season.

Some of the smallest youngsters ever representing the schools are members of the high school baseball nines this scason. Every team out for the tittle boasts one or more midgets, and as size counts for little in the national pastime these lads, newcomers for the most part, are making good with a vengeance.

"Gooll' Gerardi, veteran sbortfielder of Husiness, is a small youngster who fellished to come near leading the basting honors this season. Gerardi is stocky, has a fine stand at the plate, and in eleven games has hit for an average of better than 400. At Eastern, and in eleven games has hit for an average of better than 400. The Euclid Tennis Club, out Mt. Pleas In his magazine, Walter Travis asks these two questions:

"What I want to know, irrespective of the United States Golf Association's definition of an ameter, is whether you consider Francis Oulmet an arrateur or a professional?

"Another point. Do you think Oulmet's past conduct has in any way been detrimental to the best interests of the game? On the other hand, do you think that his connection with golf has inverted to the good of the game genterally?"

"The present towards a spring tournament to day for the singles champions ship of the club. Undaunted by the fact that it brought up the rear in the Suburban League last season, the Euclid organization is full of enthusiasm and expects to give all the other clubs of that circuit a struggle this year. The club has strengthened greatly and is building four new courts near its present inverse to the game genterally?" ant way, starts its first spring tourna-

In the present tournament practically all of the club's players will take part.

With Guimet, Arthur G. Lockwood, Paul Tewksbory and John H. Sullivan, the latter Ouimet's partner have been declared professional golfers.

Lockwood is greatly disappointed, as he has given up his former connection with a sporting goods store and is deveting his time now to golf architecture. The latter business is countenanced by the U. S. G. A. all of the club's players will take part.
